MONUMENT TO MARK OLD BRADDOCK ROAD

To Be Unveiled in Alexandria on May 26 by Virginia Colonial Dames.

ALEXANDRIA, May 10.—Colonial Dames from all parts of Virginia are expected to be here on May 26 and 27, when the Virginia Colonial Dames of America will unveil a monument marking the beginning of the old Braddock road, the route taken by General Braddock when he left Alexandria in April, 1755, to fight the French and Indians.

The monument is made of cannon abandoned by General Braddock in 1755 in this city.

The base of the monument is constructed of cobble stones which, tradition says, were placed in the streets of Alexandria by Hessian soldiers who were captured during the Revolutionary war. The stones have been cemented together in a mass and on one side will be placed a tablet bearing the following inscription:

"This monument marks the trail taken by the army of General Braddock, which left in April, 1755, to fight the French and Indians; erected by the Society of the Colonial Dames of Virginia, May 26, 1915. On the other side the inscription reads: 'The cannon used here was abandoned by General Braddock at old Alexandria, April, 1755. The cobblestones which form the mound were taken from the streets of Alexandria where they were placed in 1755 by act of the Virginia House of Burgesses.'

Bride's Veil and Gown
Ablaze, Wedding Delayed

ALLEN TOWN, Pa., May 10.—Tragedy almost interrupted nuptial happiness at wedding in Allen town, Pa., today. The bride's veil and gown, which were carried by one of the best men, caught fire in contact with the bride's long veil, and in an instant the gauze adornment was ablaze.

The march was temporarily broken up and in a few minutes the fire was extinguished after the veil and part of the bride's gown had been consumed.

The bride was burned on her arms and shoulder. Determined that the ceremony should go on, a visit was made to a nearby store and in a short time a new trousseau was purchased, and following the return of the bride party to the church the nuptials were consummated.

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY —ELEPHANTS COMING

Ringling Brothers Make Children of City Happy With Street
Pageant.

"Hold your horses. The elephants are coming."

This admonition from the lusty-lunged criers of Ringling Brothers' circus marked the beginning of today's happiness to Washington's children, and many grown-ups.

O-o-h, what a parade!

Miles of wagons with pictures of ancient warriors and dazzling females on the outside, piquing the curiosity to the bursting point as to what was inside; chariots for every nation with folks dressed up as natives carrying flags and parasols representing each; and the animals of every clime and country in cages and on the hoof.

The parade was all that advance notices claimed for it, and exclamations of delight from the thousands that lined the streets were forerunners of the best of this afternoon and night would afford.

The grand street pageant left the circus grounds at Fifteenth street and Florida avenue northeast shortly after scheduled time and proceeded westerly in Florida avenue to K street and thence to Georgetown, returning Pennsylvania avenue, First and B streets and Tennessee avenue were traversed to the circus grounds.

The parade was led by a phalanx of blondes on cream horses, and interspersed along the huge caravan were blondes and brunettes with few hints by way of variety: escorted by noble cavaliers. There were pony four-in-hand gallops, and one big chariot had twenty horses hooked four abreast.

The excitement ran highest when a dozen huge cages with sides of rolled wire came into view, and then the lions, then wolves and tigers, and then the lions. Sure enough, with a gay-dressed guide riding beside them, rode Mr. and Mrs. Lion, and what d'ye think, Mr. Lion was asleep. His tumbled head in a corner and his big paws pointed awayward. "Just like the lazy man," some one with a surfrage button was heard to murmur, and all the time Mamma Lion was doing a marathon around the cage. When came panthers and more leopards and another family of lions where Mamma Lion managed to keep her nose awake.

And then the elephants. There they were, sure as you live. Each had a red-canted and white-hatted keeper on his head with a long, sharp hook. There were twenty-four of 'em, and they each hung onto the tail of the one in front with his trunk. There was one whopper, too, with iron chains on his feet hooking him front and behind.

The last thing was the steam piano, and the deluge of the thousands of those who braved the sun and the heat of the pavements and pushed and shoved and cheered while the mile of parade passed.

The afternoon performance began at 3 o'clock with the spectacle, "Bolo-mo and the Queen of Sheba." The spectacle was followed by the circus performance, in which 400 men and women appear. More novelties than ever before appear, the Ringlings have brought from Europe the majority of their people.

'RHYTHMIC PICTURES' TO BE PRESENTED

American Federation of Arts
Gives Pageant at Willard on Wednesday Evening.

When the sculptors, artists, literateurs and architects constituting the American Federation of Arts gather in the ball room at the New Willard on Wednesday at 8 p. m. for the entertainment arranged in their honor by the Glenna Smith Timlin, chairman of the pageant committee of the federation, they will experience the thrill which comes of seeing a wonderful bit of imaginative verse translated into "rhythmic pictures."

A distinctive feature of the performance, which includes a masque play, a dance poem, and a suite of five group dances, will be the stage setting and the exquisitely blended colorings of the dramatic work by the various wood creatures constituting the cast of "The Faun, a Fantasy of the Washington Woodlands."

Mrs. Richard Mansfield (Beatrice Cameron), who will read the prologue, will make her first appearance here in several years.

Based on Richard Hovey's lyrical protest against "crowds and cooks" and "gowned and trousered fools," the masque has for its setting a phantasm forest of tree trunks, and pools from which emerge in eerie fashion, dryads, naiads, bird spirits, breezes, and other symbolic forest denizens called forth by the spirit of the Wood in recognition of

The Faun, a creature half spirit, half human.

The climax comes in the advent of the Storm Spirits which, to the wild measures of the storm music in "William Tell," do a whirlwind dance, their approach signalled by the cloudburst of the storm. In the flood of light which marks the finale appears the Spirit of Benediction, which in the foreground performs a Noyes-style dance, while in the shadowy distance passes a procession of woodland creatures.

Oreg's "Berecuse" and "Cradle Song," Chaminade's "The Faun," and Rubinstein's "Angela's Benediction" are among orchestral numbers which mark the presentation. The cast includes Mrs. Richard Mansfield, Mildred Anderson, Dorothy Keen, Virginia Watrous, Martha Barrie, Rene Serrin, Emily Bradley, Dorothy Wright, Pauline Lemon, Sereta Taylor, Elizabeth Kingsbury, Jamie Hearin, Peggy Neumuller, Helen Hotchkiss, Frances Galloway, Florence Reynolds, Viola Maliet, Margaret King, Rachel Kerr, and Effie Baker Lewis.

In the "dance poem," seven small girls arrive upon a woodland scene to discover the Laughing Lady of whom they saw the way "To The Golden City."

Mrs. Mansfield will read the lines of the poem which was written for Mrs. Florence Fleming.

While a chorus including Misses Vera Hamby, Marion Newton, and Marjorie Davidson, who will appear by courtesy of the management of the Columbia Theater, will chant response, Mrs. Estelle Willoughby Iona, of this city, wrote the incidental music for the "Golden City."

The entire program, including the "Call of Spring," in which Misses Emetha Barrie, Margaret King, Louise
